Origin of the Arduinna

In Celtic mythology, Arduinna is the Gaul moon goddess of hunting and the forest. She is the equivalent of the Roman goddess Diana whose name relates to the massive Ardennes forest whose symbol is also the boar. She is associated with the divinity of nature and instinctive forces and is the mother of plants and animals and mistress of the forest.

History of a barge unlike any other...

Built in 1956 in Cambrai, it was used to transport grain by bargemen from Bethune, carrying around 420 tons. This productive boat was renamed five times: St. Jacques 1er, then Natacha, Ardu III, Sylvie and finally Arduinna. For more than 40 years it navigated rivers and canals in northeastern Europe.

In 2004 on the banks of Meudon, it was transformed into a boat with lodging – designed to take maximum advantage of light and produce a feeling of well-being.

Dimensions : 126.3 feet long X 18 feet wide - two floors

A unique place close to nature

Crossing the deck of the Arduinna changes everything.

Opening the door, you enter a dreamlike place where stillness, warmth and enchantment reign, created according to inspiration drawn from nature.

Absorb the surrounding atmosphere and derive essential mental and physical well-being.

Worries and tensions evaporate.

You are in the Arduinna's universe.
